

Guide for VIOs: Health and Care (Staffing)(Scotland) Act 2019

Introduction

On 1st April 2024, the Health and Care \(Staffing\) \(Scotland\) 2019 Act will be enacted. This legislation is applicable to some volunteer involving organisations, particularly those who engage volunteers in the delivery of regulated care services.

This guide will help you to:

- Identify if this new legislation is applicable to you or your organisation.
- Understand what you might need to do to prepare for its implementation.
- Find out more information about the Act, including accessing training.

Is this new legislation applicable to me?

Whilst the Health and Care (Staffing) (Scotland) 2019 Act applies to health and care settings, volunteers are only within the scope of the legislation in regulated care services.

Regulated care services include the following:

- a support service
- a care home service
- a school care accommodation service
- a nurse agency
- a childcare agency
- a secure accommodation service
- an offender accommodation service
- an adoption service
- a fostering service
- an adult placement service
- child minding
- day care of children
- a housing support service

You can find a full list of roles in scope of the Act here.

The services within the scope of this legislation are likely to already be regulated by the Care Inspectorate and subject to existing legislative regulations around staffing. The inclusion of volunteers in primary legislation related to staffing (including volunteers) in care services is new, but volunteers have always been covered under the Social Care and Social Work Improvement \(Scotland\) \(Requirements for Care Services\) Regulations 2011. As such, if you involve volunteers in care services that are regulated by the Care Inspectorate, it is likely that you are already compliant with this new legislation.

What do I need to do to prepare?

As stated previously, if you involve volunteers in care services that are already regulated by the Care Inspectorate, it is likely that you are already compliant with the new legislation. However, at this stage, it is not entirely clear yet if the new legislation will have a tangible impact for services that involve volunteers in the delivery of care services. For this reason, we recommend that any managers of volunteers in regulated care services familiarise themselves with the new legislation and keep abreast of developments.

The accompanying Statutory Guidance for the legislation will be published when the act comes into force next April. This statutory guidance is still in draft form and there is some uncertainty about the expectations around volunteering. We have provided some feedback to the government about how volunteering is reflected in the statutory guidance and as soon as we have clarity on any resulting changes, we will let you know. Subscribe to our newsletter to ensure you receive information as soon as we have it.

You can also take steps to ensure that you are as prepared as possible at this stage. You can read the legislation which is available here and the draft guidance which is available here - these might help you to understand what is required. You can also use this as an opportunity to review your processes for volunteer recruitment, training, support, engagement and communication to ensure that they are robust. This does not necessarily mean that you should apply the same processes that you might have for paid staff - the Act is clear that approaches should be appropriate to the role. The needs of volunteers are often different to paid staff and this should be reflected. The Volunteer Charter is a helpful tool for understanding the distinction between volunteers and paid staff.

The guides, tips and templates on our website will help you to review your approach to volunteer involvement, and you can look at the Volunteer Wiki provided by Volunteer Edinburgh. You might also consider undertaking a quality standard such as Volunteer Friendly or Investing in Volunteers to fully assess your approach to volunteer involvement with the support of an assessor.

How can I find out more?

If you require further information or clarification on the issues raised in this guide, our Policy Officer, Sarah Latto, would be happy to support any requests. Sarah can be reached by emailing sarah.latto@volunteerscotland.org.uk.

The Safe Staffing Programme team in the Care Inspectorate offer a range of resources and seminars on the Health and Care (Staffing) (Scotland) 2019 Act, including an Open Badge award and webinar series for both children's and adult services. You can find all of these resources and more here.

You can also sign up to the NHS Education for Scotland learning platform called TURAS. This platform is available for anybody and has a range of learning opportunities related to the new legislation, including a Knowledge and Skills Framework and Quality Improvement collaborative learning events.
